

TURKEYS A DRUG IN PRODUCE MARKET

Thousands of Dollars' Worth of Big Birds Spoil on Dealers' Hands.

The principal turkey season of the year closed today under conditions extremely disappointing to the commission merchants.

The demand was light in the local wholesale markets, and large amounts of both live and dressed turkeys remained unsold. The weather spoiled thousands of dollars' worth of dressed turkeys, and others were so nearly spoiled that they were offered today for whatever they would bring. It was the most unsatisfactory Thanksgiving season for the commission merchants in years.

The wholesale markets remained opened until noon today, but only a small amount of business was done. Quotations were nominally the same as those of yesterday, except as to turkeys. Some poultry was sold, and game was moderately active. Fruits and vegetables were quiet. Live stock was dull, as was to be expected on a holiday.
